Anthony Tamburro is an Associate in the Civil Litigation group.

He represents individuals, businesses and insurers in all phases of litigation across Virginia and Maryland.

Anthony's practice has spanned several distinct areas of law. He began his career at a boutique corporate bankruptcy firm in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. He later joined a prestigious Seattle firm, where his work included white collar defense, products liability, and contract disputes. Before joining McCandlish Holton, he practiced as a civil litigator at two well-regarded Richmond firms.

Anthony graduated from Emory University School of Law in 2018. While at Emory, he interned with a United States Bankruptcy Court judge and the Georgia Office of the Attorney General. He received his undergraduate degree from Colgate University in 2014, where he served as the broadcast voice of the women's hockey and men's lacrosse teams.

Outside the office, Anthony can usually be found in his backyard trying to keep his garden alive or watching his dog chase tennis balls.
